Mrs. Nixon Trip 400

WASHINGTON AP - The deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency and President Nixon's own doctor will be among 50 persons accompanying First Lady Pat Nixon on a diplomatic mission next week to Latin America.

Mrs. Nixon will be her husband's personal emissary for the inauguration of the new presidents of Venezuela and Brazil. Joining Mrs. Nixon as a goodwill ambassador for the ceremonies will be Nicholas H. Morley, a Miami businessman involved in investment and land development.

The U.S. ambassadors to Venezuela and Brazil are to comprise the rest of the delegation, the White House said Wednesday.

To attend the inauguration March 12 of Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez, Mrs. Nixon will be returning to Caracas for the first time since 1958, when she and then Vice President Nixon were beset in their motorcade by an angry mob.

This time, Mrs. Nixon will have the protection of seven Secret Service agents traveling along with her as well as other security forces when she arrives in Venezuela.

Deputy CIA Director Vernon A. Walters, who was with the Nixons during the tense 1958 incident, is going back as Mrs. Nixon's interpreter, according to the White House.

Fluent in eight languages, Gen. Walters also translated for Mrs. Nixon when she went to Peru to aid earthquake victims there in 1970.

The President's personal White House physician, Dr. Walter R. Tkach, has been assigned to Mrs. Nixon's six-day journey. He will be absent during a period when Nixon himself has scheduled some trips.

Keeping Mrs. Nixon coiffed for receptions and public appearances on the Latin American trip will be her personal hairdresser and secretary, Mrs. Rita DeSantis, who previously accompanied the First Lady on journeys to China and the Soviet Union.

Aboard the big presidential jet with Mrs. Nixon and the others will be a news media contingent of 29.

Mrs. Nixon leaves Monday on the 9,165-mile trip, which will take her to Brasilia for the inauguration March 15 of Brazilian President Gen. Ernesto Geisel.

The First Lady will return March 16 to join up with President Nixon in Nashville, Tenn., where they will celebrate her 62nd birthday at a performance of the Grand Ole Opry.
